Merry Christmas

Jesus Christ is coming to town. I was listening to the Christmas song about Santa coming to town and couldn't help substituting the one whose coming means so much more. Christians wait for Jesus. He is the Gift, freely given, who has come and who is returning.

Advent, which means "coming," began November 30 and ends December 25, Christmas Day. During this time, Christians celebrate Christ's having come while looking forward to his return. And as sinners we try to be nice. We remember that God does see us when we are sleeping and when we are awake. God does know when we sin and when we repent. That he sees us when we are crying and suffering and confused and weary. He cares and gives grace and mercy and strength. During this time of Advent, we wait. We wait and watch for our King to come in majesty and glory.

While we wait we carry out the Church's Great Commission: feed the hungry, clothe the naked, visit the sick and the dying and the imprisoned. We also use the time to do some deep thinking about the hope found in the little baby born of Mary, born to set us free. Christians have been left in charge until Jesus returns. As part of the Body of Christ, we at St. John's are doing our part. We are raising money for the Heifer Project to help a poor family in another country. We are collecting food for the hungry and homeless in this area. As a congregation and as individuals we minister to those in need and we pray. And we wait. We wait for our Lord to return and make crooked things straight; wrong things right; dark things light.

This Advent, take time to be still, to reflect on the hope found in Jesus. Travel with Mary and Joseph as they make their way towards Bethlehem. Listen for the angels. Follow for the star. Make room in your heart for the Savior.
